"Give me an L" The Circleville Swim Team starts a cheer for their fellow swimmer. And they end it with "Give me a T... What's that spell? Larry Stant... Who's the National Champ?... Larry Stant."

After swim practice Friday, the Piranhas showed their appreciation to Larry Stant who will be leaving for the Pan American Wheelchair Games in Mexico City on Thursday.

This is the second year Stant was chosen to represent the United States Wheelchair Team in swimming competition. He said about 25 countries will be at the competition.

Stant will be in Mexico until Sept. 17. The first five days will be spent getting used to the altitude, and may include some sightseeing. After this, Stant said they will be getting down to business. The site for the wheelchair games is where the 1968 World Olympics were held. Stant said he will compete in Canada next year two weeks after the regular Olympic Games are over.

The order of events when the competition starts will be practice, the preliminaries, then the finals.

Stant said he has to practice everyday. If he goes more than two days out of water, practicing is much harder for him.

During Stant's time trials Friday, the Piranhas formed two lines in the pool to cheer him. Before they left the pool, each one of the swimmers shook hands with Stant and wished him good luck.

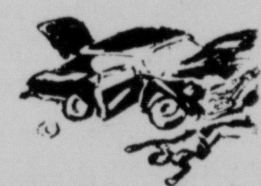

Earlier this summer, Stant competed in meets at Ohio State University, in Pennsylvania and Michigan. He set a total of 11 records out of a possible 12.

During national competition at the University of Illinois this year, he broke his previous record in the 25-yard freestyle with a time of 21.4 seconds. He also placed first in the 25 yard backstroke.

Stant, of 1995 Ottawa Drive, was paralyzed from the waist down as the result of a motorcycle accident in 1972.

Stant said he has been in a chair for two years and has been on the U.S. Wheelchair team for the same length of time. His interest in swimming didn't start after the accident, Stant said he used to be a lifeguard.

U. S. Consul Held Hostage By Terrorists

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Terrorists seeking freedom for Red Army fanatics jailed in Japan stormed the U.S. Embassy in Kuala Lumpur today, seized U.S. consul Robert Stebbins, 43, a Swedish diplomat and other hostages. Japan said it would meet their demands.

The terrorists shot and wounded three security men during the takeover, threatened to blow up the building but let a self-declared deadline pass without incident.

"We have decided to follow what the Kuala Lumpur terrorists are demanding," a spokesman for the office of Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Miki said in Tokyo. Miki is currently in the United States, preparing for talks with President Ford.

"We made the decision to secure the lives of the hostages, but the final action will be subject to the intentions of the Malaysian government."

The spokesman said preparations were being made the release of seven prisoners from Japanese jails, as demanded by the terrorists. Meanwhile, Japan Air Lines was preparing a special plane to carry the seven to Kuala Lumpur and pick up the terrorists for a flight to wherever they want to go.

The exact number of terrorists and hostages was not immediately known. Diplomats said earlier there were four to six terrorists, and that in addition to the American and the Swede, the hostages included Australians, Malaysians, a Japanese and a Singaporean who had gone to obtain visas at the U.S. Embassy's consular section.

The terrorists fired occasional shots from the building housing several embassies, wounding two policemen and a guard. Their conditions were not known.

A note dropped from a window said the terrorists demanded the release of seven Red Army men jailed in Japan, a helicopter to take them from the roof of the building and a Japan Air Lines plane to fly them to an unnamed destination.

Shortly after the deadline expired at 5:30 p.m. local time (6 a.m. EDT), V.

Manickavasagam, Malaysia's communications minister, arrived at the building and said the terrorists had agreed to meet him. He said the government instructed him to hold talks with the raiders after an emergency cabinet meeting.

Malaysian government sources said the terrorists were insisting on holding negotiations with the Japanese government through the Malaysian authorities.

Malaysian officials met with the U.S. Embassy's acting head of mission, Robert S. Dillon, and Japanese Ambassador Michiaki Suma, to discuss the situation.

U.S. Embassy officials said earlier that "four to six" raiders threatened to detonate explosives in the building if their demands were not met.

Oil Bill Failure To Bring Charges From Both Sides

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the price of fuel goes up, so will the intensity of blame-shifting by Democrats and Republicans as each side points the finger at the other.

In the final hours before Congress left last week for a month-long vacation, the lawmakers put aside their frustrated debate over energy policy and voted simply to continue the present system of oil price controls for another six months.

President Ford is expected to veto that bill when he returns from Europe with the result that price controls on more than 60 per cent of U.S.-produced oil will abruptly end Aug. 31. That oil will be permitted to rise in price from $5.25 a barrel to the unregulated market price of more than $11 a barrel.

By the administration's estimates, the retail prices of petroleum products then will rise gradually, adding as much as 6 cents to the gallon price over an eight-month period.

By taking off the month of August, Congress will not be able to attempt to override Ford's expected veto of the price-control extension measure before the controls expire, although there is some doubt that Congress would succeed in any such override effort.

Administration officials may have given a sneak preview of Ford's expected veto message in their criticism of Congress for failing to come up with an energy program. Thus, the lawmakers are particularly sensitive about their vacation.

Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., told the House in the waning hours before adjournment: "It is an irresponsible and unconscionable outrage against the American people" for Congress to go home without an energy solution. He was booed and hissed by members.

But when Republican Clarence J. Brown, R-Ohio, used a parliamentary tactic to force an end to work on a Democratic-backed oil pricing bill, there were cheers from both sides of the aisle. Both wanted to call it quits for now.

Democratic National Committee Chairman Robert S. Strauss defended the recess of the Democrat-controlled Congress.

"I know that almost all members... are anxious to spend some time with their constituents at home, to hear... how they feel about higher food prices, higher fuel prices, and fewer jobs."

He said Congress completed seven months of hard work and "it has a good, solid record of achievement in a very difficult era," Strauss said. "The Congress has time and again provided responses to the great needs of the nation, but has often seen these answers nullified by a veto-prone President."

Nickel Will Still Buy Coffee, Or Perhaps A Few Peanuts

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

You can't ride the Staten Island ferry for a nickel anymore, but the five-cent piece hasn't entirely lost its value.

Among the things turned up in an Associated Press spot check of items that still cost only a nickel are:

—A chance at the jackpot in one of the 64 per cent of Nevada's 47,000 slot machines that take nickels.

—About 2½ tablespoons of peanuts from a vending machine in Alabama. (The same machines used to provide about a tablespoon for a penny so five cents is a big increase, but it's a nickel nonetheless.)

—A cup of coffee at the Last Chance cafe on Interstate 80, west of Reno.

—A local telephone call in Wapakoneta and Cridersville, Ohio.

(Wapakoneta's other claim to fame is that it is the hometown of astronaut Neil Armstrong.)

—A "Swiss warbler" bird whistle at the Party Center in the Ala Moana shopping center in Honolulu. (The Party Center is a real bonanza for nickel spenders. Other five-cent items include balloons, elastic cords for masquerade masks and plastic spiders, six for a nickel.)

The most-famous of the five-cent bargains was probably the Staten Island ferry, but New York City's fiscal crisis killed the nickel ride.

As of 12:01 a.m. today, the round-trip fare went to 25 cents under legislation passed by the City Council a little more than a week ago and signed by Mayor Abraham Beame on Friday.

Actually, you haven't been able to ride the ferry for a nickel for some time. That's because you had to buy a round trip. You put your fare in the turnstile — one dime please, exact change — on the Manhattan side. That entitled you to ride both ways at five cents a ride. There are no turnstiles on the Staten Island side.

If you were on Staten Island, wanted to go to Manhattan and didn't plan to return, you could ride for free. (The fare increase won't change that; you'll simply have to put in a quarter instead of a dime on the Manhattan side.)

Another recent nickel charge went by the boards on July 1. The tolls on the Burlington Bristol and Tacony-Palmira Bridges over the Delaware River between New Jersey and Pennsylvania went from a nickel to a dime. They're still a bargain, though. Other bridges across the Delaware cost 60 cents.

Cloudy with showers and thunderstorms today and a chance of thunderstorms tonight, high today, low 80s. Low tonight, mid 60s. Mostly sunny Tuesday, high, low 80s. Probability of precipitation, 70 per cent today, 40 per cent tonight and 20 per cent tomorrow. Temperatures Sunday were: high, 90; low, 70.

State Lawmakers On Call For Energy Bill

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — State lawmakers, instead of heading for the vacations many had planned, are on call this week to return to the capitol to finish action on a major state energy bill.

The measure was rushed through the House 82-1 just before midnight Friday when both chambers had planned to recess until Sept. 10. But the Senate insisted the measure would be studied before that chamber acts. It adjourned until next Thursday afternoon. The full membership of the House could return the same day.

Rep. A. G. Lancione, D-99 Bellaire, emerged as sponsor of the bipartisan measure which represented the first real compromise of the year between the Democrat-controlled legislature and GOP Gov. James A. Rhodes.

Rhodes earlier had vetoed a Democratic energy bill, in part because an agency it created would consist partly of legislators. He maintained that to have them as voting members of an executive branch agency would be unconstitutional.

The energy agency provided for in the compromise bill reflects a compromise on that issue. Five voting members would be named by the governor, and four legislators, if the bill is approved, would serve as ex-officio, or nonvoting members.

Otherwise, the bill provides that the agency can approve grants and loans to help gas burning industries convert to coal, and assist in the development of coal gasification facilities and technology.

Another prime purpose would be a tax abatement scheme to help Ohio win the big Coalcon gasification facility, to be built with federal backing, away from other states competing for it, including neighboring West Virginia.

Lancione defended the speed with which the House approved the bill — the committee which recommended it 13-0 met only about 10 minutes — by pointing out that it actually represents a consolidation of legislation already pending. "We'd heard them all before. This just brings them into one bill," he said.

Senate Majority Leader Oliver Ocasek, D-27 Akron, and Sen. Robert E. O'Shaughnessy, D-15 Columbus, chairman of the Senate Energy and Environment Committee, disagreed that the measure had enough study.

"For us to act on a bill of this magnitude in a single day would be irresponsible," said O'Shaughnessy, whose committee will consider the bill, possibly with amendments, before it is presented on the Senate floor.

A bill passed by the Senate, if only slightly different, still would require a vote of the full House on concurrence. For that reason, House members were asked to be ready to return.

A deadlock over differences could send the immediately effective emergency act to a joint conference committee, delaying the end of the summer session further.

In other actions during Friday's marathon deliberations, the legislature completed passage of a bill hiking unemployment compensation benefits from a maximum of $114 to $150 a week. Also enacted was a measure providing about $823 million, mostly for capital construction projects for higher education and mental health, in the next two years.

The $823 million includes some operating funds that were vetoed by Rhodes in the two-year appropriations bill. Among those were $130 million for Aid to Dependent Children subsidies, $15 million for programs for the mentally retarded, a special $10 million subsidy to help the University of Cincinnati become a full fledged state institution, and $5 million to help start up the energy agency called on in the upcoming energy bill.

Washington's own Mad Hatter, Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz is rattling his teacup again. According to the eminent Cabinet member, grain sales to Russia do not have anything to do with higher consumer food prices in the U.S.

Butz told reporters that to make such a linkup was "intellectually naive or dishonest."

Despite Butz' apparent scorn for the intelligence level of the American people, his own economists have stated that the grain sales could mean higher food prices for consumers, but that expected big harvests would cut the impact.

Fresh on the heels of this momentous news comes word that the harvest may not be all that great, with dry weather hurting crops in much of the country.

It is nothing short of incredible that Butz could really be convinced that the lessening of grain available, due to the sale, would not mean the price of the remainder would not rise.

The immutable law of supply and demand says if an item is in shorter supply, for whatever reason, the cost will rise.

The only fortunate part of the price rise is that farmers are getting some of the money, and may be able to recoup some of the losses they have had previously.

The Agriculture Department predicts a 6 to 8 per cent boost in over-all prices for the year, attributable to many factors. We can only guess how accurate that prediction may be, since most economic crystal balls have been badly clouded for some time.

Butz is known around Washington mainly for his bad jokes. It appears that the worst joke is Butz himself.

Who Do You Owe?

By JIM BISHOP

"Who," asks Abe Rudetsky of Chicago, "do you owe?"

A simple question on a simple postcard. WHO DO I owe? Economically, I don't owe a dime. He must mean morally. If that is that question, the answer is nearly everybody.

JOHN M. BISHOP, SR. — My father. He gave me a sense of intellectual curiosity. He also convinced me that no subject and no person is dull.

JENNY BISHOP — My mother. She convinced me that God is everywhere watching everybody. If I did not help the helpless, God would get me. I believe.

SISTER MARIA ALACOQUE — Third grade. Taught me, not tolerance, but appreciation of other people of many faiths or no faith at all.

MARK HELLINGER — Took two copy boys — Jimmy Cannon and Jim Bishop — taught them the fundamentals of simple words, small sentences, the use and abuse of figures of speech.

EMILE GAUVREAU — First editor to hire me as a $25-a-week reporter. Hiked my salary, in Depression years, to $60. I bought a house.

CHARLES COLEBAUGH — Who wanted a writer-editor for Collier's magazine, but wasn't sure I was the man.

BOB CONSIDINE — Who lied gallantly to Colebaugh, assuring him that I was the best writer in New York. Colebaugh believed it and hired me.

ROGER STRAUS, JR. — A Navy lieutenant who convinced LeBaron Barker of Doubleday that I could write a book. Barker gave me $3,000 to start work on the biography of an alcoholic, entitled "The Glass Crutch."

WILLIAM LENGEL — Literary gold miner and magazine editor who nominated me as founding editor of Gold Medal Books. Most of these patrons took long chances.

RALPH GORMAN, C.P. — Priest-editor of "The Sign" who knew that I quit editing to become a free-lance writer. He sent $175 a month for nothing — "Don't worry," he wrote. "I'll get it out of you some way."

PHYLLIS JACKSON — Who read a two-and-a-quarter page outline of a book, and became my literary agent. "Start writing," she said. "It's going to be great."

EVAN THOMAS, JR. — Editor at Harper. Four publishers had declined the book. He said, "Write it. Contract follows." The book was "The Day Lincoln Was Shot." Sold 3 million copies in 16 languages. He also published "The Day Christ Died."

DARRYL ZANUCK — He bought "The Day Christ Died" for 20th Century-Fox for $250,000. He said, "Nice intimate story of Jesus and the twelve." All thirteen are still on a Hollywood shelf.

BILL HEARST, JR. — Said two trusted aides, Frank Conniff and Jack O'Connell, told him I could write a syndicated newspaper column. Could I? I would try low-key story-telling.

HOBERT LEWIS — Chief factotum at "Reader's Digest." Asked me to write articles.

JIM HAGERTY, JR. — Press secretary to President Eisenhower. The first to invite me to the White House to research and write about the head man. This was followed by similar invitations from Kennedy and Johnson. My old man warned, "You're getting too big for your britches."

LAWRENCE HUGHES — President of William Morrow & Company. Took a manuscript of mine declined by another book publisher — "F.D.R.'s Last Year" — and managed to win the best reviews of my life.

MILTON KAPLAN — General

Manager of King Features Syndicate. He sold this column to unsuspecting editors all over the country. A soothing, unassuming keeper of columnistic and comic strip prima donnas.

KELLY BISHOP — World Champion wife. Beautiful blonde who smiles when I'm low, and says, "Write it. You can do it. You're a genius." Thank God for convincing liars!

An interesting question, Mr. Rudetsky. "Who do I owe?" Or is it "whom?" Either way, I owe a heck of a lot of people. The list I gave you are just the first persons to come to mind.

I never lost sight of two things: One is that the bubble could burst any time and I would lose whatever slender talent I have. The other is that I know 20 newspaper reporters offhand who could — if given the breaks — do anything I have done.

Sadly, maybe better . . .

Lockheed Admits Foreign Payoffs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lockheed Aircraft Corp. admits it funneled at least $22 million to foreign government officials and political groups since 1970 to sell its airplanes abroad.

The payments are under investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Senate subcommittee on multinational corporations.

Lockheed is refusing to disclose the names of those who took the payoffs, or to identify the several countries involved.

Lockheed said it believes the payoffs are in line with local business practices, and that disclosure could seriously injure Lockheed, possibly prompting recall of millions of dollars in advance payments put up by foreign customers.

The company said some of the payoffs were made from a secret, $750,000 slush fund which has now been discontinued. Leftover cash has been put into the company's bank account, it said.

The disclosure came in a routine report on quarterly earnings, released Friday in Washington and Burbank, Calif.

Lockheed now has about $1.6 billion worth of orders in some 30 foreign nations for its airplanes, chiefly the L1011 TriStar jet passenger plane and the C130 cargo plane. About 12 per cent of all its sales are to foreign governments.

Earlier, Lockheed had repeatedly denied making any overseas payoffs after one of its competitors, Northrop Corp., said its own bribes and questionable foreign payments were made in imitation of Lockheed's practices.

Lockheed has held up its annual shareholders meeting because of the SEC probe. The company said it is now negotiating with SEC officials on the terms of a consent decree to settle an expected civil court suit charging it with failing to make sufficient disclosure to the public.

Lockheed indicated it would be hurt in its overseas sales unless it is allowed to continue making payoffs in secret.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the multinationals panel, called Lockheed's payoffs "deplorable" and said new laws are needed to halt such payments, especially by arms makers.

He said the subcommittee would consider sometime in September whether to force Lockheed to disclose further details of the payoff.

Phone Books Drop Item On Origin

NEW YORK (AP)—A statement saying the telephone was invented in the United States will be deleted from new bicentennial telephone books because a Canadian insisted the device was invented in his country.

The 180 million telephone books — which for the first time this year will bear a common cover design — will be revised to say merely that Alexander Graham Bell first used the telephone to transmit intelligible speech in Boston on May 10, 1876.

The credit for that concession belongs to Keith deBellefeuille Percy, first secretary of the Canadian Embassy in Washington.

When the books first began to be distributed in May, Percy became upset by the statement in the book that Bell "changed the way the world communicated with his invention of the telephone in Boston in May 1876."

Not so said Percy. As every Canadian schoolchild knows the telephone was invented in Brantford, Ont. in 1874.

Percy wrote to an affiliate of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. and quoted Bell as saying, "It is rather a curious thing to me to see the dispute about where the telephone was invented...Of this you may be sure, the telephone was invented in Canada."

"Dark Horse" is a term, first used in 1844, in American politics to describe a major party presidential candidate who is not expected to receive the nomination.

Today In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Monday, Aug. 4, the 216th day of 1975. There are 149 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1914, Britain declared war on Germany at the beginning of the First World I.

On this date:

In 1790, a U.S. naval force which later became the Coast Guard was formed.

In 1805, the United States concluded a peace treaty with Tripoli.

In 1892, Lizzie Borden was arrested in Fall River, Mass., for the hatchet murder of her father and stepmother.

In 1916, the United States bought the Danish Virgin Islands for $25 million.

In 1955, eleven U.S. Air Force fliers captured during the Korean War reached Hong Kong after being freed from prison in China.

In 1962, President John F. Kennedy announced that the highest American award for a civilian would go to Dr. Frances Kelsey, the Federal official who kept the harmful drug, Thalidomide, off the American market.

Ten years ago: President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana was in touch with U.S. and North Vietnamese leaders in an effort to restore peace in Vietnam.

Five years ago: The death toll from Hurricane Celia was put at more than 30, in Cuba, Florida and Texas.

One year ago: Portugal's government announced that it was ready to recognize the territory of Portuguese Guinea as an independent state.

Today's birthdays: Britain's Queen Mother Elizabeth is 75. Former Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson is 76.

Thought for today: Youth will be served — English proverb.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, General George Washington reported to the Continental Congress that ammunition was critically short, that his regiments differed greatly in size and that steps must be taken to prepare winter quarters for his men.

Production Jobs Dip

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A modest increase in employment by Ohio mines and quarries represented the only exception to a general decline in state production worker employment for June.

Figures compiled by the Ohio State University Center for Business and Economic Research indicate production worker employment overall dropped 10 per cent in June from June of 1975 and 9 per cent in comparison of the first six months of this year and last year.

The mining industry increased employment by 1 per cent in June over June 1974 and was up 4 per cent for the first six months of the year.

The largest employment decline in June was reported by the lumber products industry, which fell 20 per cent below last year's June level, followed by stone, clay and glass products, down 18 per cent; rubber products, down 17 per cent; and machinery and metal products, each down 16 per cent.

The center's geographic breakdown indicated reduced production worker employment in all eight city-county areas reported.

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Whenever I make a sudden move, or when I put my head way back, I get a quick flash of dizziness. It disappears immediately. How can I find out what this means?

Mrs. B. L., N.C.

Dear Mrs. L.:

A patient's description of dizziness very often is confused with a sense of faintness, a headache or almost any other feeling in the head.

Actual dizziness should refer only to a feeling in which a person is standing still and objects rotate about him or her.

Sometimes, the reverse is true. Objects stand still and the patient has a feeling that he or she is rotating or tumbling.

A self-made diagnosis for dizziness is not always disorder of the inner ear. This, indeed, does occur occasionally, but far less frequently than is commonly suspected.

When the hearing is good, other reasons should be sought. Low blood pressure, for example, is a common reason for a complaint such as yours.

When doctors ask their patients what their eating habits are, long periods of fasting may be uncovered. The result is that a combination of low, or relatively low, blood pressure, coupled with inadequate food, especially protein intake, may be responsible for the "flash" of faintness rather than true dizziness.

A complete ear examination is essential. Perhaps more important is to find out if there is any circulatory problem or neurological problem that produces this symptom.

I must emphasize that the simple causes of true dizziness far outweigh the serious ones.

I remember reading that tiny turtles are dangerous as house pets. Our twins have been begging for one. What do you think?

Mrs. T. D., La.

Dear Mrs. D.:

There is a growing awareness that baby turtles carry the bacteria, or germs, that cause salmonella infections.

These infections are far too serious to be taken casually. It has been estimated that more than 250,000 cases of salmonella poisoning directly traced to pet turtles occur each year.

The Food and Drug Administration has recently announced a complete ban on the sale of pet turtles. This is a wise law and undoubtedly will markedly reduce this unnecessary hazard.

There are other safer pets that your children will enjoy.

Young Blacksmith Finds People Want Older Image

NEW RICHMOND, Ohio (AP) — "A lot of people don't like a young blacksmith," says Michael Saunderson, 28, a village blacksmith here. "They don't figure he's got the know-how of an older one. Really, it don't matter what the age is."

The slim Saunderson, who said people expect a "big, burly-built" blacksmith, works in a graphics plant while trying to establish himself as a fulltime blacksmith.

He was an exercise boy for his father, who raced horses, before acquiring an interest in the art of shoeing horses.

Saunderson attended the Oklahoma Farriers College in Sperry to learn the trade.

The ancient trade is pretty well confined to shoeing horses, he explained, adding that gunsmiths now make gun barrels and other hand made iron and steel products.

The village craftsman served an internship at River Downs Race Course in Cincinnati, where, he learned, "It's kind of hard starting out."

But there is work on and off the race track. At the recent Monroe Township

Bicentennial celebration, he caused a sensation with many people who had never seen a blacksmith fashion horseshoes over white hot coals and bang away on an anvil.

"At the college, it took me a whole day just to do two shoes at first," he said. "Now I can do all four in 45 minutes."

Getting the horse to cooperate can be a major problem. "It doesn't help to have the horse walk away while it's being shod," he said, adding that some horses like to take a bite out of a bent-over blacksmith's back.

Horses who have had bad experiences with other blacksmiths can also cause trouble, he said. If the narrow line on the perimeter of the hoof is missed by the nail, the horse can go lame.

"It only takes one blacksmith to mess it all up," Saunderson said. "They see another one coming and get all upset, but when they see you're not going to hurt them, they settle down."

"Other than that, horse shoeing is rather simple," he added.

Saunderson lives on a small farm with his wife and daughter and their horse "Twirly."

The horse was so named by his daughter Vanessa, 4, who kept asking to ride and being told it was "too early" to learn, Saunderson said.

Vanessa started calling the horse "Twirly" and it stuck, he laughed.

Defenders Face Court Contempt

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Refusal of a judge's order to take a case from three tardy lawyers has brought contempt citations, over two hours in jail and $100 fines each for two Cincinnati public defenders as well as promises to appeal.

Dick Gasen and Pete Rosenwald of the Public Defender's Division of the Legal Aid Society, were in Cincinnati Municipal Court for other cases when Judge Thomas Crush asked them to represent two persons at a preliminary hearing on charges of receiving stolen property.

William Stovall, 18, and Marjorie Stovall, 23, were being represented by three other public defenders but they were not present in court the first two times Judge Crush called the case.

The judge then asked Gasen and Rosenwald to take the case and they refused, saying they were not familiar with the case and had not talked to the defendants.

Lockheed Admits Foreign Payoffs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lockheed Aircraft Corp. admits it funneled at least $22 million to foreign government officials and political groups since 1970 to sell its airplanes abroad.

The payments are under investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Senate subcommittee on multinational corporations.

Lockheed is refusing to disclose the names of those who took the payoffs, or to identify the several countries involved.

Lockheed said it believes the payoffs are in line with local business practices, and that disclosure could seriously injure Lockheed, possibly prompting recall of millions of dollars in advance payments put up by foreign customers.

The company said some of the payoffs were made from a secret, $750,000 slush fund which has now been discontinued. Leftover cash has been put into the company's bank account, it said.

The disclosure came in a routine report on quarterly earnings, released Friday in Washington and Burbank, Calif.

Lockheed now has about $1.6 billion worth of orders in some 30 foreign nations for its airplanes, chiefly the L1011 TriStar jet passenger plane and the C130 cargo plane. About 12 per cent of all its sales are to foreign governments.

Earlier, Lockheed had repeatedly denied making any overseas payoffs after one of its competitors, Northrop Corp., said its own bribes and questionable foreign payments were made in imitation of Lockheed's practices.

Lockheed has held up its annual shareholders meeting because of the SEC probe. The company said it is now negotiating with SEC officials on the terms of a consent decree to settle an expected civil court suit charging it with failing to make sufficient disclosure to the public.

Lockheed indicated it would be hurt in its overseas sales unless it is allowed to continue making payoffs in secret.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the multinational panel, called Lockheed's payoffs "deplorable" and said new laws are needed to halt such payments, especially by arms makers.

He said the subcommittee would consider sometime in September whether to force Lockheed to disclose further details of the payoff.

Phone Books Drop Item On Origin

NEW YORK (AP)—A statement saying the telephone was invented in the United States will be deleted from new bicentennial telephone books because a Canadian insisted the device was invented in his country.

The 180 million telephone books — which for the first time this year will bear a common cover design — will be revised to say merely that Alexander Graham Bell first used the telephone to transmit intelligible speech in Boston on May 10, 1876.

The credit for that concession belongs to Keith deBellefeuille Percy, first secretary of the Canadian Embassy in Washington.

When the books first began to be distributed in May, Percy became upset by the statement in the book that Bell "changed the way the world communicated with his invention of the telephone in Boston in May 1876."

Not so said Percy. As every Canadian schoolchild knows the telephone was invented in Brantford, Ont. in 1874.

Percy wrote to an affiliate of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. and quoted Bell as saying, "It is rather a curious thing to me to see the dispute about where the telephone was invented...Of this you may be sure, the telephone was invented in Canada."

"Dark Horse" is a term, first used in 1844, in American politics to describe a major party presidential candidate who is not expected to receive the nomination.

Today In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Monday, Aug. 4, the 216th day of 1975. There are 149 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1914, Britain declared war on Germany at the beginning of the First World I.

On this date:

In 1790, a U.S. naval force which later became the Coast Guard was formed.

In 1805, the United States concluded a peace treaty with Tripoli.

In 1892, Lizzie Borden was arrested in Fall River, Mass., for the hatchet murder of her father and stepmother.

In 1916, the United States bought the Danish Virgin Islands for $25 million.

In 1955, eleven U.S. Air Force fliers captured during the Korean War reached Hong Kong after being freed from prison in China.

In 1962, President John F. Kennedy announced that the highest American award for a civilian would go to Dr. Frances Kelsey, the Federal official who kept the harmful drug, Thalidomide, off the American market.

Ten years ago: President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana was in touch with U.S. and North Vietnamese leaders in an effort to restore peace in Vietnam.

Five years ago: The death toll from Hurricane Celia was put at more than 30, in Cuba, Florida and Texas.

One year ago: Portugal's government announced that it was ready to recognize the territory of Portuguese Guinea as an independent state.

Today's birthdays: Britain's Queen Mother Elizabeth is 75. Former Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson is 76.

Thought for today: Youth will be served — English proverb.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, General George Washington reported to the Continental Congress that ammunition was critically short, that his regiments differed greatly in size and that steps must be taken to prepare winter quarters for his men.

Production Jobs Dip

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A modest increase in employment by Ohio mines and quarries represented the only exception to a general decline in state production worker employment for June.

Figures compiled by the Ohio State University Center for Business and Economic Research indicate production worker employment overall dropped 10 per cent in June from June of 1975 and 9 per cent in comparison of the first six months of this year and last year.

The mining industry increased employment by 1 per cent in June over June 1974 and was up 4 per cent for the first six months of the year.

The largest employment decline in June was reported by the lumber products industry, which fell 20 per cent below last year's June level, followed by stone, clay and glass products, down 18 per cent; rubber products, down 17 per cent; and machinery and metal products, each down 16 per cent.

The center's geographic breakdown indicated reduced production worker employment in all eight city-county areas reported.

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Whenever I make a sudden move, or when I put my head way back, I get a quick flash of dizziness. It disappears immediately. How can I find out what this means?

Mrs. B. L., N.C.

Dear Mrs. L.:
A patient's description of dizziness very often is confused with a sense of faintness, a headache or almost any other feeling in the head.

Actual dizziness should refer only to a feeling in which a person is standing still and objects rotate about him or her.

Sometimes, the reverse is true. Objects stand still and the patient has a feeling that he or she is rotating or tumbling.

A self-made diagnosis for dizziness is not always disorder of the inner ear. This, indeed, does occur occasionally, but far less frequently than is commonly suspected.

When the hearing is good, other reasons should be sought. Low blood pressure, for example, is a common reason for a complaint such as yours.

When doctors ask their patients what their eating habits are, long periods of fasting may be uncovered. The result is that a combination of low, or relatively low, blood pressure, coupled with inadequate food, especially protein intake, may be responsible for the "flash" of faintness rather than true dizziness.

A complete ear examination is essential. Perhaps more important is to find out if there is any circulatory problem or neurological problem that produces this symptom.

I must emphasize that the simple causes of true dizziness far outweigh the serious ones.

I remember reading that tiny turtles are dangerous as house pets. Our twins have been begging for one. What do you think?

Mrs. T. D., La.

Dear Mrs. D.:
There is a growing awareness that baby turtles carry the bacteria, or germs, that cause salmonella infections.

These infections are far too serious to be taken casually. It has been estimated that more than 250,000 cases of salmonella poisoning directly traced to pet turtles occur each year.

The Food and Drug Administration has recently announced a complete ban on the sale of pet turtles. This is a wise law and undoubtedly will markedly reduce this unnecessary hazard.

There are other safer pets that your children will enjoy.

Young Blacksmith Finds People Want Older Image

NEW RICHMOND, Ohio (AP) — "A lot of people don't like a young blacksmith," says Michael Sanderson, 28, a village blacksmith here. "They don't figure he's got the know-how of an older one. Really, it don't matter what the age is."

The slim Sanderson, who said people expect a "big, burly-built" blacksmith, works in a graphics plant while trying to establish himself as a fulltime blacksmith.

He was an exercise boy for his father, who raced horses, before acquiring an interest in the art of shoeing horses.

Sanderson attended the Oklahoma Farriers College in Sperry to learn the trade.

The ancient trade is pretty well confined to shoeing horses, he explained, adding that gunsmiths now make gun barrels and other hand made iron and steel products.

The village craftsman served an internship at River Downs Race Course in Cincinnati, where, he learned, "It's kind of hard starting out."

But there is work on and off the race track. At the recent Monroe Township

Bicentennial celebration, he caused a sensation with many people who had never seen a blacksmith fashion horseshoes over white hot coals and bang away on an anvil.

"At the college, it took me a whole day just to do two shoes at first," he said. "Now I can do all four in 45 minutes."

Getting the horse to cooperate can be a major problem. "It doesn't help to have the horse walk away while it's being shod," he said, adding that some horses like to take a bite out of a bent-over blacksmith's back.

Horses who have had bad experiences with other blacksmiths can also cause trouble, he said. If the narrow line on the perimeter of the hoof is missed by the nail, the horse can go lame.

"It only takes one blacksmith to mess it all up," Sanderson said. "They see another one coming and get all upset, but when they see you're not going to hurt them, they settle down."

"Other than that, horse shoeing is rather simple," he added.

Sanderson lives on a small farm with his wife and daughter and their horse "Twirly."

The horse was so named by his daughter Vanessa, 4, who kept asking to ride and being told it was "too early" to learn, Sanderson said.

Vanessa started calling the horse "Twirly" and it stuck, he laughed.

Defenders Face Court Contempt

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Refusal of a judge's order to take a case from three tardy lawyers has brought contempt citations, over two hours in jail and $100 fines each for two Cincinnati public defenders as well as promises to appeal.

Dick Gasen and Pete Rosenwald of the Public Defender's Division of the Legal Aid Society, were in Cincinnati Municipal Court for other cases when Judge Thomas Crush asked them to represent two persons at a preliminary hearing on charges of receiving stolen property.

William Stovall, 18, and Marjorie Stovall, 23, were being represented by three other public defenders but they were not present in court the first two times Judge Crush called the case.

The judge then asked Gasen and Rosenwald to take the case and they refused, saying they were not familiar with the case and had not talked to the defendants.

It would have been fairer to areas hard hit by the shortages to have rationed two dozen lids to each family, he said.

Vanik called the situation scandalous. He said commerce officials had told his office for the last six months that no shortages would exist, although he said residents in his district cannot find them anywhere.

He called on commerce to join with the Federal Trade Commission "and help bring sufficient lids to all canners who desperately need them right now."

The FTC, at the urging of Vanik and other congressmen, has begun an antitrust investigation into the canning lid shortage and the FBI is looking into charges of black marketing.

Postal District Manager Named

The appointment of William R. Roberts, acting district manager, Columbus Postal District was announced by Regional Postmaster General Clarence B. Gels.

Roberts will assume operational direction of 700 post offices and 77 postal stations and branches having 14,000 employees.

The Columbus Postal District was recently enlarged to include all post offices in the Toledo Postal District and part of the Akron District.

John Mizick Jr. will continue as acting officer in charge of the Columbus Post Office. Francis E. Szollosi who preceded Mr. Roberts has retired after 28 years service.

Roberts joined the Postal Service as a substitute Clerk at Mission, Kansas in 1947, was named foreman of mails in 1955 and subsequently foreman of clerks and carriers, assistant branch manager and superintendent of mails. He was named postal operations specialist at Norman, Oklahoma in 1969. He became District Customer Service Representative, Acting District Manager and earlier this year District Manager of the Wichita, Kansas Postal District.

Migrants Told Stay Home

MARION, Ind. (AP) — A migrant farm workers leader says he hopes an estimated 5,000 migrants on their way to Indiana will change their minds and stay home.

Benito Lopez, regional director of Associated Migrant Opportunity Services, said there are already between 16,000 and 18,000 migrants in the state for the tomato harvest. And he says any more will put a severe strain on migrant services.

The tomato harvest begins about mid-August.

"The week before last I had 200 people at my office who we couldn't place," Lopez said. "People keep migrating. It's going to be a big hassle this year."

Lopez said migrant families who come to Indiana without firm work contracts "don't stand a chance" of finding jobs.

Lopez said he feared some farmers might try to take advantage of the influx of migrants, mostly from Texas and Michigan, by allowing them to live in overcrowded camps and by cutting wages.

Social Reputation Of Fox Raised

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — This year's Ohio legislature has raised the social reputation of the fox—until now regarded under law the same as the lowly rat or mouse.

It set a fox season running from Nov. 15 to March 1 and gave the gray and red fox the same classification as other fur bearing animals: the mink, weasel, raccoon, skunk, opossum, muskrat and beaver.

Dale Roach, chief of the enforcement section of the Division of Wildlife, said contrary to myths "about foxes in chicken houses, he's a beneficial animal. His primary diet consists of mice and rodents."

Roach said, "It's true, the fox will take a chicken if he gets a chance. Man does, too, you know, but he does it to survive. The chickens are all in cages now. The old days are over."

The wildlife official said trapping of foxes for their pelts has been on the upswing in Ohio in recent years, demonstrating the need to give them more protection. He attributed the trend to the increasing popularity of natural furs.

In the 1972-1973 season, Roach said, trappers in Ohio took 12,350 gray foxes and 10,950 reds, and received an average of $32 a pelt.

"Not too many years ago, you only got about 15 cents for a fox pelt," he said.

The next year, 1973-1974, he said, the trapper take was 18,900 grays and 15,500 reds, although the price per pelt dropped to about $20.

Roach said the division had no estimate of Ohio's fox population, but felt it should not be jeopardized. The fox is an important predator, and is needed to maintain nature's balance, he said.

Several years ago in one area of Texas, Roach said, a campaign was launched to get rid of the fox.

"They shot and poisoned and everything else, and they did a good job," said Roach.

He said the prairie dog, a burrowing rodent, "practically took over all the pasture land" in six months.

The Texans promptly began efforts to get the foxes back, he said.

The legislature, while regulating hunting and trapping, did nothing to disturb the sport of fox chasing, provided it does not result in the death of the fox.

Fox chasing is popular, mostly in southeast and southern Ohio, where sportsmen like to get together to run their hounds.

"They're a unique breed," said Roach. "They like to just sit around campfires at night and listen to their dogs run."

Social Reputation Of Fox Raised

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — This year's Ohio legislature has raised the social reputation of the fox—until now regarded under law the same as the lowly rat or mouse.

It set a fox season running from Nov. 15 to March 1 and gave the gray and red fox the same classification as other fur bearing animals: the mink, weasel, raccoon, skunk, opossum, muskrat and beaver.

Dale Roach, chief of the enforcement section of the Division of Wildlife, said contrary to myths "about foxes in chicken houses, he's a beneficial animal. His primary diet consists of mice and rodents."

Roach said, "It's true, the fox will take a chicken if he gets a chance. Man does, too, you know, but he does it to survive. The chickens are all in cages now. The old days are over."

The wildlife official said trapping of foxes for their pelts has been on the upswing in Ohio in recent years, demonstrating the need to give them more protection. He attributed the trend to the increasing popularity of natural furs.

In the 1972-1973 season, Roach said, trappers in Ohio took 12,350 gray foxes and 10,950 reds, and received an average of $32 a pelt.

"Not too many years ago, you only got about 15 cents for a fox pelt," he said.

The next year, 1973-1974, he said, the trapper take was 18,900 grays and 15,500 reds, although the price per pelt dropped to about $20.

Roach said the division had no estimate of Ohio's fox population, but felt it should not be jeopardized. The fox is an important predator, and is needed to maintain nature's balance, he said.

Several years ago in one area of Texas, Roach said, a campaign was launched to get rid of the fox.

"They shot and poisoned and everything else, and they did a good job," said Roach.

He said the prairie dog, a burrowing rodent, "practically took over all the pasture land" in six months.

The Texans promptly began efforts

to get the foxes back, he said.

The legislature, while regulating hunting and trapping, did nothing to disturb the sport of fox chasing, provided it does not result in the death of the fox.

Fox chasing is popular, mostly in southeast and southern Ohio, where sportsmen like to get together to run their hounds.

"They're a unique breed," said Roach. "They like to just sit around campfires at night and listen to their dogs run."

Migrants Told Stay Home

MARION, Ind. (AP) — A migrant farm workers leader says he hopes an estimated 5,000 migrants on their way to Indiana will change their minds and stay home.

Benito Lopez, regional director of Associated Migrant Opportunity Services, said there are already between 16,000 and 18,000 migrants in the state for the tomato harvest. And he says any more will put a severe strain on migrant services.

The tomato harvest begins about mid-August.

"The week before last I had 200 people at my office who we couldn't place," Lopez said. "People keep migrating. It's going to be a big hassle this year."

Lopez said migrant families who come to Indiana without firm work contracts "don't stand a chance" of finding jobs.

Lopez said he feared some farmers might try to take advantage of the influx of migrants, mostly from Texas and Michigan, by allowing them to live in overcrowded camps and by cutting wages.

Jews, during the Passover festival in memory of the flight of ancient Hebrews from Egypt, eat matzo, unleavened bread. The Bible says they baked matzos because they did not have time to bake leavened breads.

She carried a bouquet of yellow daisies and carnations with a handkerchief tucked inside, a gift from Mrs. Audalene Poling. The bride's gown was made by the bridegroom's mother.

Bridesmaids were Miss Shawn Courtney Priest of Leesburg and Miss Candy Sue Newland, sister of the bride. They wore identical gowns of yellow printed chiffon and carried baskets of daisies. The attendants wore white picture hats with ribbon streamers to match their dresses. The bridesmaids also wore pearl earrings, gifts of the bride.

Flower girl, Miss Jennie Renee Newland of Circleville, niece of the bride, wore a gown of yellow print and a daisy in her hair. She carried a basket of yellow daisies.

Master Jason Hettinger of Laurelville was ring bearer. He carried a white satin pillow centered with two gold rings made by Miss Cathy Newland, sister of the bride.

Mr. Darwin Eimers of Sumner, Iowa was best man. Mr. Richard Morehead of Circleville, brother of the bridegroom and Mr. James McPherson of Circleville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, were ushers.

The bride's mother wore a floor length gown of cream colored knit with brown accessories. The bridegroom's mother chose a full length gown of floral print. Both mothers wore corsages of white and yellow roses and carnations.

A reception in the social rooms of the church followed the ceremony. The bride's table, decorated in yellow and white, was centered with a three tiered wedding cake topped with bride and groom figurines, and decorated with yellow daisies. White wedding bells were suspended from the center of the room.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

As the aftermath of an auto accident, a motorist is walloped by a big verdict in the courtroom. It is more money than he is insured for, more money than he can possibly scrape together. Can he "get out from under" by going into bankruptcy?

Not necessarily. It depends on how wrongfully he had behaved in bringing about the accident. The law says that not even bankruptcy will wipe out liability for "wilful and malicious" injuries inflicted upon others.

Consider an example: A motorist, driving home drunk from a party, ran down and killed a pedestrian. Held legally liable, he sought relief in bankruptcy.

But the evidence showed that 1) his driving had been negligent, and 2) he had announced at the beginning of the party that he fully intended to get drunk before heading for home.

This deliberate disregard for safety, said the court, put his conduct into the "wilful and malicious" category and barred him from getting relief in bankruptcy.

But in another case, the motorist had caused a collision merely by driving too fast through an intersection. Finding him guilty of nothing more than a momentary lapse of attention, the court said this could not be described as wilful and malicious.

Result: the motorist was able to escape a heavy burden of liability by going into bankruptcy.

Suppose that after a collision a motorist gets into an argument, loses his temper, and beats up the other driver. If he is held liable later for assault and battery, he would not be able to use the bankruptcy way out.

An assault and battery, say the courts, is the kind of intentional wrongdoing that the Bankruptcy Act was never intended to forgive.

Ryan Rips Glenn Stand On Energy

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio energy chief Robert S. Ryan criticized Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, for speaking against a Senate bill amendment offered by Sen. Robert Taft, R-Ohio, which called for an additional allotment of $35 million for development of Appalachia's shale gas reserves.

Ryan said Saturday that the defeat in the U.S. Senate of the bill providing more money for shale gas research will hurt Ohio's working people.

"Senator Glenn has previously said that his scientific expertise will lead us out of the energy wilderness. His action Thursday in leading the fight against shale gas development fails to demonstrate an awareness of the depth of the problem," said Ryan, executive secretary of the Ohio Energy Emergency Commission.

"According to Federal Energy Research and Development Administration information Appalachian shale gas reserves are the largest left in the world," Ryan said. "At a time when thousands of Ohioans are facing the specter of unemployment because of a lack of natural gas we must pull out all stops to develop new resources."

Ryan said what is needed is "an all-out development program to solve the natural gas problem. This is the only way we can assure full production for our factories and full employment for our workers."

Neither Ohio senator could be reached for comment.

Fortas And Ervin Scheduled To Speak

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Former Sen. Sam Ervin of North Carolina and Abe Fortas, onetime justice of the Supreme Court, are scheduled to deliver lectures today at College of Mount St. Joseph's Institute on Futurology.

Fortas will discuss the topic of "responsible freedom."

Betty Ford Learning To Love Being First Lady

WASHINGTON (AP) — Betty Ford says she has found excitement and self-confidence in her first year in the White House, even though it was marked by illness and occasional loneliness.

She's ready to campaign for her husband's election in 1976 by traveling with him as much as possible. She looks forward to continuing to do things "that interest me and that I've been involved in."

The First Lady points out those things include continuing to push for passage of the Equal Rights Amendment, expressing interest in the performing arts and handicapped and retarded people.

From being "scared to death" at the prospect of moving into the White House when her husband suddenly became president in August 1974, Mrs. Ford has come to grips with life in the 132-room, 18-acre executive mansion.

Responding to questions as the August anniversary date approached, Mrs. Ford told The Associated Press: "I had no idea when we came a year ago how many responsibilities there would be and decisions to be made as First Lady. I found that it was practically a seven-day-week, 24-hour-a-day job."

From entertaining a dozen heads of state to answering an average of 2,000 letters a week, Mrs. Ford has been coping with that job.

"Gradually, I've gained more confidence in my ability to handle situations," she added.

And, as a political wife for more than a quarter-century whose husband has worked long hours and been absent on frequent political campaigns, she has found:

"The White House has given me more time to spend with my husband."

The Fords have established a relaxed family life in the White House, with pet cat "Shan," and a new Golden Retriever dog "Liberty," whom they expect to have some puppies soon.

They enjoy dancing and official social life, often lingering at White House parties, dancing cheek to cheek.

During this past year, the President and his wife have passed some family milestones, too. Daughter Susan turned 18 and was graduated from high school, and son Jack, 23, completed his four years as a forestry major at Utah State University.

The four Ford children, who are comfortable in blue jeans and like the outdoor life, have indicated they really preferred their more private lives, when the family lived in a modest home in suburban Alexandria, Va., without Secret Service agents.

All but Susan have spent much of the first year away from the White House.

Son Michael, a divinity student, and his wife, Gayle Brumbaugh, live in Massachusetts, and sons Steven and Jack have spent much of their time out West.

But they all frankly enjoyed some of the special privileges that go with White House life, including riding on presidential planes and impressing their friends with White House invitations.

The Ford children have disclosed that their parents feel lonely in the big Executive Mansion unless one of them is around, bringing in young friends. With Susan working as summer intern photographer on a Topeka, Kan., newspaper, and Steve studying grizzly bears in the Montana mountains, Jack has taken up residence and plans to join his father's presidential campaign.

Mrs. Ford says as far as she is concerned the year in the White House has "all been exciting — every day."

"Every convenience is provided for the First Family by a very excellent staff," but she notes that friends just can't come and go as they used to in the Alexandria neighborhood. "At times it is lonely and you can feel isolated."

Mrs. Ford finds her responsibilities are confining, too. "Here we are with the Kennedy Center five minutes away, yet we have very little time and I haven't been able to get there," she said.

When asked about her most difficult moments in the past year, Mrs. Ford promptly responded:

"Trying to pull my family through my cancer operation. I really had to pull them through. I had to make them happy because they were so sad and upset."

Following that breast cancer surgery last September, Mrs. Ford kept her own spirits up as well as the family's, and her doctors say there is no sign of recurrence.

Illness kept the 57-year-old Mrs. Ford from launching into an active schedule as First Lady and she has continued to conduct a low-key program, with a minimum of outside activities.

She also has suffered from osteoarthritis, a condition she has had for more than a dozen years. She is frequently seen in planes and cars wearing a neck brace she keeps handy to avoid jostling that might cause a flareup of her neck and back pains.

Though she had to cancel out on Ford's trips to Japan and Martinique last winter because of illness, by spring Mrs. Ford was traveling with the President to Europe and making a swing on her own to California. There, she unexpectedly went to visit Vietnam refugees at the Marine Corps' Camp Pendleton.

Mrs. Ford also joined the President at the recent 35-nation Helsinki summit conference and did some sightseeing of her own on the 10-day trip to five European capitals. On the second day of the trip, she suffered from jet lag and fatigue.

But, by the time her first year was over, the idea had been dispelled that Mrs. Ford's illness might have any effect on Ford's plans to seek four more years in office.

President Ford said his whole family, including his wife, was behind him in the decision to run for the presidency in 1976.

He told a recent news conference that Mrs. Ford has been "an effective spokesman" for the Equal Rights Amendment to end sex discrimination and, "come next year, I suspect, she can speak for both of us."

Mrs. Ford prides herself on having influenced Ford to promote women in top jobs, including the naming of Carla Hills to his Cabinet as secretary of housing and urban development. But she said she likes to do it privately.

Mrs. Ford doesn't go in for speech making, except for making occasional informal remarks at dinners where she has been honored.

New Courts Created

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The legislature completed passage Friday of an immediately effective emergency bill creating six new municipal courts in Ohio and adding new judges in several cities.

The measure, which now goes to the governor, provides for new courts in Auglaize and Miami Counties, Norwalk, New Philadelphia, Wadsworth and Wayne County.

It also carries with it language that abolishes police courts in Ohio, although only one municipality, Ottawa Hills, has a police court. Its jurisdiction is transferred to the Toledo Municipal Court.

The bill creates new judgeships in Akron, Bedford (2), Fairborn, Fremont, Franklin County, Kettering, Lancaster, Toledo and Xenia.

She says her participation in the 1976 election campaign will involve "traveling with my husband as much as possible."

Mrs. Ford "doesn't anticipate any trips of her own," said Press Secretary Sheila Weidenfeld. And there won't be any political speeches.

But the First Lady said she'll keep campaigning for ERA. That "is a consistent goal as far as I am concerned."

Explosion Injures 3 Cincy Workmen

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Three workmen were injured Sunday when an acetylene tank, accidentally placed in a scrap metal cutting machine, caused an explosion that shattered windows in a one-block area.

The blast caused more than $10,000 damage, according to Cincinnati Fire Marshall John Pfaff.

All three men were treated and released.

The explosion occurred at the Deutsch and Sons Scrap Metal Co.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Watching the opening of the $163 million Louisiana Superdome from seats a dizzying 17 stories up was like watching Mardi Gras from a ferris wheel. Barnes Fight Continues Against Vo-Ed

UPPER SANDUSKY, Ohio (AP) — Two and one-half years ago, Upper Sandusky realtor Dennis Barnes launched his fight against vocational education.

Since then, he figures he has spent $3,000 of his own money and 2,000 hours of his time in a frustrating fight against one of Gov. James A. Rhodes' favorite projects—vocational education.

Barnes, 42, filed his first suit in April, 1973, claiming in Wyandot County Common Pleas Court that state funding of vocational education is unconstitutional.

Since that time, Barnes has attacked vo-ed in county and appellate courts in northwestern Ohio, plus the Ohio and U. S. Supreme Courts. Barnes has acted as his own attorney in almost all cases, substituting exhaustive research for his own lack of legal training.

Barnes said his aversion to vo-ed began when he was a member of this north central Ohio community school board. The board was considering implementing a vo-ed program of its own, which he felt would change the values of the school system.

Barnes claims vo-ed violates the state constitution because it doesn't meet the constitutional definition of "common schools." He contends "common schools" provide learning while vo-ed schools teach a trade.

Commissioners Award Winner Named

Mary Clark, chairman of the homemaking department of Pickaway County Fair, announced today that Louise Drummond won the commissioners special award last week. Her name was inadvertently left out of the list of winners.

Other winners not included in the list of winners were: Mrs. H. L. Hurlburt Jr., champion afghan; Ruth Sanderson, knit and crochet; Gunni Eshelman, embroidery; Mrs. Louise Eyerman, home sewing; Mrs. Jack Young, yeast bread and rolls; Mrs. Henry Bartholomew, candies.

with him said. "Man, ain't it something," said another man from a nearby seat.

"Exciting space," observed a young architect in the jargon of his profession.

Dixieland musicians down on the floor gave way to the New Orleans Summer Pops Orchestra, which in turn stepped aside for Adler Ledoux's Cajun fiddlers. The Southern University band wound up the six-hour free show Sunday. All of it blared from giant speakers suspended from the stadium's roof 270 feet up.

The musicians appeared ant-sized from the to seats, but six 22-by-26-foot television screens magnified them in close-up color.

Haute couture rubbed elbows with tank tops and cutoffs, youth with the elderly, roaming the miles of ramps, lining up at the portable beer stands under the 13-acre roof.

"It's a typical Mardi Gras crowd," said John Pechon Jr., director of security for the Dome. He estimated that 80,000 people were inside the arena at the peak of the day's action.

Much of the big stadium was locked away from public view: the plush private suites, convention meeting rooms, office spaces. Much of it — an estimated $1 million worth — was still unfinished: escalators and elevators didn't work, ceiling tiles hadn't been installed, and water fountains were dry. The crowd didn't seem to mind.

Cars backed up a half mile waiting to get into the parking garages as others tried to get out, but there were no angry shouts and little horn tooting.

The Dome was four years in planning and an equal number of years in construction. It has been the subject of political controversy and two dozen lawsuits, and its financial dealings have been investigated by federal, state and local authorities. Its cost ballooned from the initial bid price of $93 million to the current $163 million.

The entire Louisiana territory was purchased for $15 million in 1803, but nobody in the Mardi Gras atmosphere inside the Dome cared to make the comparison.

Cable Named To Purdue Faculty

Richard E. Crable, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kermit E. Crable 251 Sherwood Drive, has accepted a faculty position at Purdue University beginning with the fall semester.

Dr. Crable, formerly associated with Drake University in Des Moines, is an assistant professor in the Department of Communication. In addition to his regular teaching duties, he will be director of the basic communication course at Purdue.

Crable, who received his doctorate in Communication from Ohio State in 1973, is the author of articles in professional journals and essays in communication anthologies.

He recently authored a book entitled "Argumentation as Communication" due for publication in early 1976, by Charles E. Merrill Publishing Company, Columbus, Ohio. Dr. and Mrs. Crable will reside in West Lafayette, Ind. with their children Bryan, 4, and Audrey, 10 months.

Brazilian Coffee Loss To Be Heavy

LONDRINA, Brazil (AP)—Brazilian coffee experts now say that about 70 per cent of the country's coffee crop has been destroyed by a killer frost in southern Brazil.

The intense frost defoliated millions of coffee trees and from an airplane the devastated hills of Parana state and thousands of acres of fertile coffee land in three other states between Rio de Janeiro and this southern city resembled the scorched trail of a marauding army.

Most Londrina coffee producers, collectors and administrators agreed that this was the "worst frost this century."

"The frost was terrible, it couldn't be worse," said Marcos Schaulff, owner of a major plantation near Londrina. "Not one of these trees will produce another coffee bean for two years. But in June before the frost, I collected a record 40,000 bags of coffee," he added.

The predicament of the wellstocked producer surrounded by 120,000 withered coffee trees reflects Brazil's position on the international market.

Most experts speculate that Brazil will use its coffee reserves to retain its traditional 37 per cent share of world coffee exports next year. Brazilian coffee, which will earn the nation an estimated $1.2 billion to $1.5 billion in 1975, currently fills about one-third of the world's coffee pots.

Selling Brazilian Coffee Institute stockpiles would, however, leave the cupboards bare for 1977, when many plants would still not have recovered from the frost, experts said.

Regional directors of the institute have estimated that 70 per cent of Brazil's 1976 coffee harvest is gone, but estimates from independent agencies, like the U.S. Commerce Department, have not yet been released.

At any rate, the catastrophe is certain to boost coffee prices around the world. Consumer prices in Brazil soared 60 per cent this week following 100 per cent increases of coffee quotations on New York and London exchanges.

Secret Service Probes Garbage

LANTANA, Fla. (AP) — The National Enquirer says the story it wrote after a reporter retrieved several bags of trash from behind Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's home has prompted a Secret Service investigation.

The weekly newspaper says in its latest edition it was told by a Secret Service spokesman that the agency is investigating why "important documents were thrown out in Mr. Kissinger's garbage."

The newspaper reported that the trash, in addition to such items as a liquor shopping list, included detailed work schedules for agents assigned to Kissinger and a note about weapons and ammunition used by the agents.

In its latest issue, the newspaper said Secret Service spokesman Jack Warner wrote asking for the return of any Secret Service material. The newspaper said it would comply.

Barnes Fight Continues Against Vo-Ed

UPPER SANDUSKY, Ohio (AP) — Two and one-half years ago, Upper Sandusky realtor Dennis Barnes launched his fight against vocational education.

Since then, he figures he has spent $3,000 of his own money and 2,000 hours of his time in a frustrating fight against one of Gov. James A. Rhodes' favorite projects—vocational education.

Barnes, 42, filed his first suit in April, 1973, claiming in Wyandot County Common Pleas Court that state funding of vocational education is unconstitutional.

Old Techniques Used In House

YORK, Maine (AP) — Disenchanted with contemporary home building, small groups of northern New England craftsmen are turning to America's colonial past for old construction techniques and new inspiration.

These groups have been attracting customers by building homes the way they were built more than 200 years ago, using methods known as timber framing or post-and-beam constructing.

"All of us have worked with conventional methods and materials, which is why we're doing this," said Stewart Elliott of York, a 32-year-old carpenter who organized Housesmiths three years ago.

He said similar groups have been formed in Marshfield, Vt., and Alstead and Barrington, N.H.

Elliott claims his timberframed houses, using posts and beams as large as 9-by 15-inches, are sturdier than conventionally framed dwellings, which get their structural strength from plywood sheathing nailed to 2 by 4-building studs.

"Drive a truck through a conventional house and it will collapse," he said. "Drive it through a timber-framed house and you'll have a hole in the wall, but the house will remain standing."

Housesmiths models its homes after Cape Cods, saltboxes and garrisons. The group claims its buildings will last 200 or 300 years.

Thus far, the group has built houses ranged in price from $25,000 to $85,000, depending on size and finishing. Housesmiths members say their buildings cost about $24 to $26 a square foot, compared to $30 a square foot for conventional homes.

Elliott gets his designs from scale drawings of classic 18th century homes, prepared as a WPA project during the 1930s and available from the Library of Congress.

"We try to reproduce a house in as close detail as possible to the traditional house" while meeting state and local building codes and adding bathrooms, laundry rooms and other amenities, he said.

The group's carpentry tools are a mixture of old and new. Power saws are used alongside antique adzes, mallets and chisels, often collected from old barns. The older hand tools are used to fashion joints. Timbers are linked with wooden pegs, known as trenails.

Housesmiths, which took its name from an 18th century term describing a craftsman who constructed houses, has a nucleus of five carpenters, with up to 15 other workers, including masons, plasterers and cabinet-makers, who do interior finishing. Elliott said the group builds four or five homes a year.

The group has resurrected the traditional ridge pole party, which takes place at a home site after the final timber is set into place. A small pine bough, sometimes known as a tree of liberty, is nailed to the peak of the house, and the owner joins the builder for a celebration.

"You get a barrel of beer and some music," said Elliott. "Then you hoot and you holler and you have a dance."

Other Nations Fight High Food Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the same time that the prices of 18 food items rose 7.6 per cent in the United States, they shot up 27 per cent in the United Kingdom, 69.4 per cent in Argentina and only 5.3 per cent in West Germany, a Foreign Agricultural Service survey shows.

The Agriculture Department agency makes a bimonthly check in 15 world capitals of the retail prices of the various items "essential to the diets of countries in the survey."

Hot, Humid Air Lingers On East Coast

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sunday afternoon showers and thunderstorms across Ohio washed the state's air clean, lifting a four-day air stagnation advisory, the National Weather Service said.

Rainfall ranging from onequarter inch in Cincinnati to more than a half inch in Youngstown was recorded by the weather service. In some areas, including Columbus, brief, but torrential, thunderstorms rapidly cleared and cooled the air.

A weather service spokesman said somewhat cooler temperatures—highs in the upper 70s and low 80s and lows in the upper 50s and low 60s—could be expected in the coming week. Temperatures in the mid and upper 90s were reported throughout the state last week as a heat wave seared the Midwest and East Coast.

The high pressure center responsible for the poor air condition had caused air pollution warnings and alerts in Steubenville, Canton, Akron, Youngstown, Cleveland and Lake and Geauga counties.

Industries in the Toledo, Cleveland, Steubenville areas were reported to have cut back Saturday to comply with the state antipollution order.

Expert KSU Testimony Slated

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — More expert testimony was in store for federal court jurors today as victims pressed for what their lawyers pledged would be the last week claims for $46 million in damages from the 1970 Kent State University shootings.

The victims' lawyers said they planned to call a film specialist to the witness stand to interpret a poor-quality home movie of the shootings.

Last week, the panel of seven men and five women deciding the claims heard an acoustics engineer testify that a student's tape recording of the shootings indicated the first shots came from M1 Army rifles.

The engineer was Scott Robinson of a Boston sound investigation firm that helped examine the Watergate tapes. He said computer analysis of the tape and reconstruction of the incident also indicated the shots came from where photos show Ohio National Guardsmen were standing.

The victims' film expert was believed to be one who first analyzed the home movie for the U.S. Justice Department when the government was seeking criminal indictments against guardsmen involved in the incident. His report was that only demonstrators could be seen within 85 feet of the troops when the shooting started.

The film was taken by a student with an 8mm camera in a fifth floor dormitory window about a quarter of a mile away. The original is wrinkled and scarred and cannot be used in a projector, so jurors will see a copy.

The specialist is expected to explain that the slope of the campus hill where the shooting took place creates an optical illusion and that a mass of demonstrators actually is not as close to Ohio National Guardsmen as it appears.

In a motion asking the court to appoint an expert to tell the jury what the film shows, victims' lawyers called the film "potentially the single most important piece of evidence" in the trial.

Attorneys defending 41 present or former state officials and guardsmen have not objected to the film. They believe it shows a surge of protestors toward the troops just before the firing.

The youth who took the film, Christopher R. Abell, testified last week that as he watched through his camera's telephoto lens, he saw what appeared to be a movement of students toward guardsmen just before the firing.

The Guard was sent to Kent during a weekend of rioting set off by the U.S. military incursion into Cambodia.

The shootings came as guardsmen attempted to break up an antiwar rally May 4, 1970.

Monday marked the opening of the 12th week of the trial as the victims presented their claims. They are expected to rest their case this week, turning the initiative over to the defendants.

"We try to reproduce a house in as close detail as possible to the traditional house" while meeting state and local building codes and adding bathrooms, laundry rooms and other amenities, he said.

The group's carpentry tools are a mixture of old and new. Power saws are used alongside antique adzes, mallets and chisels, often collected from old barns. The older hand tools are used to fashion joints. Timbers are linked with wooden pegs, known as trenails.

Housesmiths, which took its name from an 18th century term describing a craftsman who constructed houses, has a nucleus of five carpenters, with up to 15 other workers, including masons, plasterers and cabinet-makers, who do interior finishing. Elliott said the group builds four or five homes a year.

The group has resurrected the traditional ridge pole party, which takes place at a home site after the final timber is set into place. A small pine bough, sometimes known as a tree of liberty, is nailed to the peak of the house, and the owner joins the builder for a celebration.

"You get a barrel of beer and some music," said Elliott. "Then you hoot and you holler and you have a dance."

Other Nations Fight High Food Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the same time that the prices of 18 food items rose 7.6 per cent in the United States, they shot up 27 per cent in the United Kingdom, 69.4 per cent in Argentina and only 5.3 per cent in West Germany, a Foreign Agricultural Service survey shows.

The Agriculture Department agency makes a bimonthly check in 15 world capitals of the retail prices of the various items "essential to the diets of countries in the survey."

FAS officials here convert the prices into U.S. dollars. Currency devaluations thus affect the comparisons among capitals, the agency notes.

The survey was initiated in 1973 as part of Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz's campaign to convince Americans that, even though U.S. food prices then were going up at an annual rate of almost 15 per cent, they were eating better for less than residents of other nations.

Sugar was added to the list in December 1974, just after a 500 per cent price rocket turned down.

The results of the July 2 survey, comparing prices with those a year earlier, noted that retail sugar prices this year "have remained steady only in Brussels, Copenhagen and Mexico City ...

"A downward trend in sugar prices has been experienced in Washington and Ottawa, but the reverse is true in the European and South American capitals."

Among the other findings, boneless sirloin steak was going for $15 a pound in Tokyo, 62 cents a pound in Buenos Aires and $2.12 in Washington; eggs, $1.39 a dozen in Stockholm, 35 cents in Buenos Aires and 91 cents in Washington, and oranges, $2.87 a dozen in Bonn, 46 cents in Mexico City and $1.54 in Washington.

On a month-to-month basis, the FAS and agricultural attaches found, the United States and Japan, both at 0.3 per cent, had the lowest percentage price increases.

The Washington supermarket checked for the survey had prices below the median of the 15 capitals for steak, boneless roast chuck, canned ham, sliced bacon, broilers, eggs, butter and sugar. Above the median were the prices of pork chops, cheese, milk, cooking oil, tomatoes, onions, apples, oranges, bread and rice.

Visiting Across The Generations

MILL VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — For weeks the tiny tots attending the Tamalpais Nursery school watched their somewhat senior neighbors in the Redwoods Retirement Home across the street. Many of the seniors were confined to wheel chairs; others walked with canes.

Then one of the tiny tots made a suggestion: "Let's visit those old ladies across the street."

The nursery school teacher thought it would be a good idea and it was arranged.

Now, once a week the little ones bring smiles and happiness to the faces of the older ones.

Hot, Humid Air Lingers On East Coast

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sunday afternoon showers and thunderstorms across Ohio washed the state's air clean, lifting a four-day air stagnation advisory, the National Weather Service said.

Rainfall ranging from one-quarter inch in Cincinnati to more than a half inch in Youngstown was recorded by the weather service. In some areas, including Columbus, brief, but torrential, thunderstorms rapidly cleared and cooled the air.

A weather service spokesman said somewhat cooler temperatures—highs in the upper 70s and low 80s and lows in the upper 50s and low 60s—could be expected in the coming week. Temperatures in the mid and upper 90s were reported throughout the state last week as a heat wave seared the Midwest and East Coast.

The high pressure center responsible for the poor air condition had caused air pollution warnings and alerts in Steubenville, Canton, Akron, Youngstown, Cleveland and Lake and Geauga counties.

Industries in the Toledo, Cleveland, Steubenville areas were reported to have cut back Saturday to comply with the state antipollution order.

Expert KSU Testimony Slated

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — More expert testimony was in store for federal court jurors today as victims pressed for what their lawyers pledged would be the last week claims for $46 million in damages from the 1970 Kent State University shootings.

The victims' lawyers said they planned to call a film specialist to the witness stand to interpret a poor-quality home movie of the shootings.

Last week, the panel of seven men and five women deciding the claims heard an acoustics engineer testify that a student's tape recording of the shootings indicated the first shots came from M1 Army rifles.

The engineer was Scott Robinson of a Boston sound investigation firm that helped examine the Watergate tapes. He said computer analysis of the tape and reconstruction of the incident also indicated the shots came from where photos show Ohio National Guardsmen were standing.

The victims' film expert was believed to be one who first analyzed the home movie for the U.S. Justice Department when the government was seeking criminal indictments against guardsmen involved in the incident. His report was that only demonstrators could be seen within 85 feet of the troops when the shooting started.

The film was taken by a student with an 8mm camera in a fifth floor dormitory window about a quarter of a mile away. The original is wrinkled and scarred and cannot be used in a projector, so jurors will see a copy.

The specialist is expected to explain that the slope of the campus hill where the shooting took place creates an optical illusion and that a mass of demonstrators actually is not as close to Ohio National Guardsmen as it appears.

In a motion asking the court to appoint an expert to tell the jury what the film shows, victims' lawyers called the film "potentially the single most important piece of evidence" in the trial.

Attorneys defending 41 present or former state officials and guardsmen have not objected to the film. They believe it shows a surge of protestors toward the troops just before the firing.

The youth who took the film, Christopher R. Abell, testified last week that as he watched through his camera's telephoto lens, he saw what appeared to be a movement of students toward guardsmen just before the firing.

The Guard was sent to Kent during a weekend of rioting set off by the U.S. military incursion into Cambodia.

The shootings came as guardsmen attempted to break up an antiwar rally May 4, 1970.

Monday marked the opening of the 12th week of the trial as the victims presented their claims. They are

Littler Wins Playoff At Westchester

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — It was a typical Gene Littler understatement, softly drawled, low-key, played-down. "It was," mused Gene after due consideration, "a pretty fair shot."

The "pretty fair shot" in question was a hole in one.

It got him back in the golf tournament, set up a surging finish in brutal, 100-degree heat, allowed him to tie weary, wilting Julius Boros and go on to a playoff victory in the rich Westchester Classic.

"I didn't have any thought of winning the golf tournament until I got the hole in one," he said. "I really didn't figure I had any chance at all."

But, propelled by his fifth competitive ace, Littler played his last five holes in four under par. It finished off a six-underpar 66 that gave him a 271 total for 72 holes over the hot, hilly, humid, haze-covered Westchester Country Club course.

Boros, the overweight 55-year-old delight of millions of middle-aged hackers throughout the world, was obviously suffering in the hottest weather the tour has seen this year. He came from five strokes off the pace with a final 65, once had the lead alone, had a chance to clinch it with a six-foot birdie putt on the 72nd hole — and missed it.

"I wanted to make that putt and close everybody else out," Boros said. "I'd like to have won, but it's not life and death. Most people retire to play golf and fish. I do it for a living."

A victory would have made him the oldest winner the tour has ever produced.

The missed putt left him one in front. Littler had yet to play the 18th, a par five. He was short and right in two, pitched on to about five feet and made the birdie putt.

It sent them to the 15th to start a sudden death playoff. Both missed the fairway. Both missed the green. Littler was short. Boros' approach went through the green and up an embankment.

"He didn't have much of a shot," Gene said.

Littler chipped close. Boros ran his down the hill to the fringe, then three-putted for double bogey. Littler tapped in for par. Boros wiped the streaming sweat from his swarthy face, grinned a little, shook Littler's hand and ambled off.

Littler Wins Playoff At Westchester

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — It was a typical Gene Littler understatement, softly drawled, low-key, played-down. "It was," mused Gene after due consideration, "a pretty fair shot."

The "pretty fair shot" in question was a hole in one.

It got him back in the golf tournament, set up a surging finish in brutal, 100-degree heat, allowed him to tie weary, wilting Julius Boros and go on to a playoff victory in the rich Westchester Classic.

"I didn't have any thought of winning the golf tournament until I got the hole in one," he said. "I really didn't figure I had any chance at all."

But, propelled by his fifth competitive ace, Littler played his last five holes in four under par. It finished off a six-underpar 66 that gave him a 271 total for 72 holes over the hot, hilly, humid, haze-covered Westchester Country Club course.

Boros, the overweight 55-year-old delight of millions of middle-aged hackers throughout the world, was obviously suffering in the hottest weather the tour has seen this year. He came from five strokes off the pace with a final 65, once had the lead alone, had a chance to clinch it with a six-foot birdie putt on the 72nd hole — and missed it.

"I wanted to make that putt and close everybody else out," Boros said.

"I'd like to have won, but it's not life and death. Most people retire to play golf and fish. I do it for a living."

A victory would have made him the oldest winner the tour has ever produced.

The missed putt left him one in front. Littler had yet to play the 18th, a par five. He was short and right in two, pitched on to about five feet and made the birdie putt.

It sent them to the 15th to start a sudden death playoff. Both missed the fairway. Both missed the green. Littler was short. Boros' approach went through the green and up an embankment.

"He didn't have much of a shot," Gene said.

Littler chipped close. Boros ran his down the hill to the fringe, then three-putted for double bogey. Littler tapped in for par. Boros wiped the streaming sweat from his swarthy face, grinned a little, shook Littler's hand and ambled off.

Reds Widen Lead Over L. A.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer
 The Cincinnati Reds, the team that has everything, leads the league in doctor bills, according to head cheerleader Sparky Anderson. So scratch one alibi for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Dodgers, expected to repeat as National League West champions or at least battle for the division honors, now find themselves in a dogfight for second place with San Francisco as the Reds frolic 15½ games in front after Sunday's 3-1 victory over the Dodgers. "This team has everything," said Dave Concepcion, who clubbed a seventh-inning homer that helped cushion the Reds' triumph, their second in a three-game series against the Dodgers. "The 1970 club had more power, but this club has more balance."

And Anderson, the Cincinnati manager, won't let anybody else's injuries detract from the rousing Reds record. "All I hear about are injuries," Anderson said, referring to the Dodgers' rash of medical ailments.

"But I guarantee you we're either even (with) or far ahead of any club with the number of injuries we've had." Elsewhere in the NL, Philadelphia dumped Montreal 5-4; Atlanta beat San Diego 4-1; St. Louis beat Chicago 7-4 after dropping the first game 6-3; Pittsburgh took a pair from the New York Mets, winning 5-4 in 15 innings and 4-3, and San Francisco beat Houston 5-4 before losing 10-9. Concepcion's homer, his first since May 21, and Joe Morgan's run-scoring double backed the combined seven-hit pitching of Pat Darcy and Rawley Eastwick.

Phils 5, Expos 4
 Danny Ozark changed his mind, which had much to do with changing the outcome of the game. Tug McGraw wasn't supposed to pitch but he became the winning pitcher with two innings of hitless relief. Tommy Hutton's pinch single in the 10th inning gave McGraw and the Phillies the victory.

Braves 5, Padres 1
 Atlanta inched closer to fourth-place San Diego after Carl Morton pitched a six-hitter and Darrell Evans hit a tie-breaking single. The Braves are now 2½ games behind the Padres. Cubs 6-4, Cards 3-7

 Willie Davis drove in four runs with a home run and a double and Reggie Smith added a solo homer to lead St. Louis to its second-game victory. Two-run singles by Gene Hiser and pitcher Tom Dettore highlighted a six-run eighth inning that vaulted the Cubs over the Cardinals in the first game. Giants 5-9, Astros 4-10
 Milt May knocked in five runs and Jose Cruz' two-run double cracked a 6-6 tie in the sixth inning as Houston salvaged a doubleheader split with San Francisco. Gary Matthews drove in three runs with a two-run double and a single to lead the Giants to the victory in the opener. Pirates 5-4, Mets 4-3
 The third-place Mets started the day six games back after taking the first three games of this series but dropped to eight games off the pace with their doubleheader loss to the Pirates, leaders in the NL East. Richie Hebner drove in four runs with a double and a homer in the nightcap after former Met Duffy Dyer's 15th-inning homer won the opener.

Red Sox Pound Detroit, 6-4

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer
 For Denny Doyle, one hit was enough to make him the master of the major leagues. For Paul Splittorff, one hit was enough to keep him from completely mastering the Oakland A's. Doyle's first-inning, two-run homer gave him hits in 21 consecutive games, the longest streak in the majors this season, and helped propel Boston's red-hot Red Sox to a 6-4 victory over

Detroit. Claudell Washington's hit, a first-inning single, was enough to keep Splittorff from pitching a no-hitter. The Kansas City left-hander set down the final 26 batters he faced and the Royals rode John Mayberry's two-run homer and George Brett's three-run double to a 5-0 whitewash of the A's. In Sunday's other American League action, Milwaukee beat Baltimore 4-1, California downed Texas 6-4 and, in a pair of doubleheaders, Minnesota swept Chicago 7-4 and 12-9 and New York split with Cleveland, winning 12-1 and losing 3-2. Aurelio Rodriguez' two-run homer in the fourth inning and Ben Oglivie's two-run single in the eighth pulled Detroit into a 4-4 tie. But Cecil Cooper jumped on the first pitch in the bottom of the eighth for a homer, Boston's 100th of the season. The Red Sox, winning their fifth straight game and 23rd in their last 28, added an insurance run when Rick Burleson walked, took second on a grounder and scored on Doyle's single.

Royals 5, A's 0
 John Mayberry's two-run homer in the fourth inning and Brett's three-run double in the eighth gave Splittorff all the runs he needed. With the victory, the Royals inched within nine games of the A's in the West.

Brewers 4, Orioles 1
 Jim Slaton pitched a threehitter, losing a no-hit bid on a seventh-inning single by Lee May, and Bobby Mitchell homered to help the Brewers beat Baltimore, who fell 9½ games back of Boston in the East.

Angels 6, Rangers 4
 Mickey Rivers' tie-breaking single and Jerry Remy's sacrifice fly in the ninth gave the Angels their victory over Texas. California's Nolan Ryan allowed only two hits and struck out nine batters — including six in a row — during the first five innings, then reinjured a groin muscle and left the game in the sixth.

Twins 7-12, White Sox 4-9
 Eric Soderholm's three-run homer highlighted a four-run uprising in the first inning that carried Minnesota to its firstgame triumph, then rookie Dan Ford hit a bases-loaded double to climax an eight-run third inning that gave the Twins their second doubleheader sweep in two days over the White Sox.

Yanks 12-2, Indians 1-3
 Graig Nettles and Bobby Bonds drove in two runs apiece in a seven-run fifth inning that enabled the Yanks to breeze past Cleveland in their opener. Rico Carty's two-run homer in the eighth inning brought the Indians back in the nightcap and handed Billy Martin his first loss as the Yanks' manager.

Tribe Splits Doubleheader

NEW YORK (AP) — Rico Carty can't understand why the Cleveland Indians haven't gotten it together yet. "We've just got to get our stuff together," Carty said Sunday. "The season's, what, about three-quarters over? I wish I had some idea what happened." Carty's lamentations came after the Indians had split a doubleheader Sunday with the New York Yankees, losing 12-1 in the first game and winning 3-2 in the second. The Indians are 17½ games out of first place and only 2½ games out of the cellar. "I guess we just have to take it day-by-day," said Carty, who went hitless in the first game, a four-hitter by New York's Doc Medich, but was 4-for-4 in the second game, including the winning home run. "This is not a bad ballclub. We're too good to be playing like this," he said. In the first game, Bobby Bonds and Graig Nettles each had two RBI in a seven-run fifth, the biggest scoring inning for the Yankees this year. Medich, 9-12, gave up only one extra-base hit in the first game, a double to Rick Manning, who also had two singles and scored Cleveland's only run. "If we keep playing like this, we're gonna win our share of ball games," said Manager Billy Martin, hired only Saturday by the Yankees after the firing of Bill Virdon.

Skin Cream Comes In Plastic Bottles

NEW YORK (AP) — A plastic bottle boom is developing in the skin-care market and manufacturers are gearing up for a 40 per cent production increase by 1979, says John Malloy of the Plastic Bottle Institute, a division of the Society of the Plastics Industry. Industry officials conservatively estimate that plastic bottle production will leap by 8 to 10 per cent a year through 1980.

LONDON, Ohio (AP) — If the soup's on at John and Mona Heck's, it's liable to be green goose, pigeons, transmorgified or "stewed spinnage." And Mona Heck's favorite recipe was the pride of brides back in 1780 and reads like this: "To Make Lemon Syllabubs: To a pint of cream put a pound of double refined sugar, the juice of seven lemons, grate the rinds of two lemons into a pint of white wine, and half a pint of sake (saki), then put them all into a deep pot, whisk them for half an hour, put it into glasses the night before you want it. It is better for standing two or three days, but it will keep a week if required."

August Could Be Transportation Month

WASHINGTON (AP) — August could be called a month for inventions related to transportation. An American patent on the Diesel engine was awarded to Rudolph Diesel of Germany, and Henry Ford got one for an improved carburetor, both in August 1898, according to Intellectual Property Owners, which dug up the data. Diesel fuel and gasoline have been competing ever since, says IPO, a nonprofit group devoted to strengthening the patent system. The one-millionth patent, for a vehicle tire, was issued to Francis H. Holton, of Summit, Ohio, on Aug. 8, 1911. The Patent Office expects to issue the four-millionth patent during the next year.

Tonis Won't Part With His Model T

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — It has been driven 700,000 miles and is still going strong. That's the Model T Ford owned by Mike Tonis, 81. Every day people stop him and want to buy the car. "Never," he says. "I'll drive it forever." He has been driving the navy blue car for 41 years and got it for $5 during the Depression years. He says he has been offered $3,000 and a 1948 Cadillac. He drives the Model T regularly. It runs fine and rarely gives Tonis any trouble.

told me to," now experiments with pounds, pints and pinches in the best pioneer tradition. The cookbook contains lemon syllabubs and Heck's favorite, beef steak "pye." Directions for it read: "Beat five or six rump steaks very well with a paste pin, and season them well with pepper and salt, lay a good puff paste round the dish, and put a little water in the bottom, then lay the steaks in, with a lump of butter upon every steak, and put on the lid, cut a little paste in what form you please, and lay it on." The 30-year-old chemical fertilizer salesman, who both agree is the better cook, explains a paste pin is a rolling pin; puff paste would be puffy crust; and a lid also is a crust. "You've just got to guess how much a lump of butter is or how long to bake the pie," he said. He recommends a very slow oven. Of the 140 recipes in the book, Mrs. Heck estimates they've tried 15 to 20 percent. "I've served syllabub at a party so friends could try it. It's a sort of dessert drink, both sweet and tart at the same time. I'm not sure what syllabub means, though I ran across a reference that indicates it's a kind of dish or glass." By checking out encyclopedias, the Hecks have verified that "allegar" means malt vinegar; "barn" is the foam which rises on top of fermenting beer and was used as a leavening agent; "pettitoes" are pigs feet and a "tun dish" is a funnel. Mrs. Heck began collecting the recipes as a hobby and turned her full attention to the bicentennial project after she resigned her teaching job to care for the couple's 10-month-old daughter, Sarah. "I enjoy being home with the baby and I feel I should be here. I do needlepoint and hook rugs, but I needed something else," she said. "This project will keep me busy at least a year."

Tribe Splits Doubleheader

NEW YORK (AP) — Rico Carty can't understand why the Cleveland Indians haven't gotten it together yet. "We've just got to get our stuff together," Carty said Sunday. "The season's, what, about three-quarters over? I wish I had some idea what happened."

Carty's lamentations came after the Indians had split a doubleheader Sunday with the New York Yankees, losing 12-1 in the first game and winning 3-2 in the second.

The Indians are 17½ games out of first place and only 2½ games out of the cellar.

"This is not a bad ballclub. We're too good to be playing like this," he said. In the first game, Bobby Bonds and Graig Nettles each had two RBI in a seven-run fifth, the biggest scoring inning for the Yankees this year. Medich, 9-12, gave up only one extra-base hit in the first game, a double to Rick Manning, who also had two singles and scored Cleveland's only run.

"If we keep playing like this, we're gonna win our share of ball games,"

Views On Television

NEW YORK (AP) — Kevin Dobson, formerly of Jackson Heights, N.Y., the 523rd Military Police Battalion, and the Long Island and Santa Fe railroads, was back in town recently, helping Kojak solve crimes.

Dobson, as fans of CBS' top cop series know, plays Detective Bobby Crocker, the young gendarme at whom the Kojak often barks. Dobson will start his third year of getting barked at on CBS come Sept. 14.

The 32-year-old actor, who still has a sturdy Jackson Heights accent, sort of rolled into show biz. He says after his Army days, he spent 2½ years on the Long Island line as a trainman and conductor.

Susan, his bride-to-be, and Jane, one of his two sisters, thought he was good-looking enough to seek work on TV commercials as an extra. So the conductor got sidetracked into that line of work.

But he stayed with the railroad just in case. He said one day an actor he knew introduced him to an agent. The agent sent him to audition for a part in a play, "The Impossible Years."

He got the job and later toured the states in the play, but not before befuddling the producer, who asked Dobson to tell him about the background of Kevin Dobson.

"I said, 'Well, I went to high school,'" the actor said. "And he says, 'Nah, where'd you go to college?' I says, 'I didn't, I started before I worked on the railroad.'"

"And he goes bananas. He doesn't know what's coming off. He says, 'What's going on?' I says, 'Look, pal, I work for the Long Island Rail Road. And I've got an hour to get a train out of Penn Station."

That is how Dobson became an actor. He toured with the play, then studied acting at New York's Neighborhood Playhouse while driving cabs and tending bar to keep body and soul alive.

He also landed small parts in six films, including "The French Connection," then ventured to Hollywood in 1971 and got into TV films as a heavy in one segment of "Mod Squad."

Acting jobs still were few and far between, so, he said, he hooked on with the Santa Fe Railway in Los Angeles as an apprentice engineer, working early morning hours and doorknocking by day.

He understudied Jon Voight in a Los Angeles production of "A Streetcar Named Desire" — he abandoned the railroad for this particular trolley — but never got the big TV break he sought.

Discouraged, he returned to New York. Then he went back to Los Angeles for a possible job in a new NBC series called "Chase." He didn't get it, but landed the "Kojak" job a month later.

Views On Television

NEW YORK (AP) — Kevin Dobson, formerly of Jackson Heights, N.Y., the 523rd Military Police Battalion, and the Long Island and Santa Fe railroads, was back in town recently, helping Kojak solve crimes.

Dobson, as fans of CBS' top cop series know, plays Detective Bobby Crocker, the young gendarme at whom Kojak often barks. Dobson will start his third year of getting barked at on CBS come Sept. 14.

The 32-year-old actor, who still has a sturdy Jackson Heights accent, sort of rolled into show biz. He says after his Army days, he spent 2½ years on the Long Island line as a trainman and conductor.

Susan, his bride-to-be, and Jane, one of his two sisters, thought he was good-looking enough to seek work on TV commercials as an extra. So the conductor got sidetracked into that line of work.

But he stayed with the railroad just in case. He said one day an actor he knew introduced him to an agent. The agent sent him to audition for a part in a play, "The Impossible Years."

He got the job and later toured the states in the play, but not before befuddling the producer, who asked Dobson to tell him about the background of Kevin Dobson.

"I said, 'Well, I went to high school,'" the actor said. "And he says, 'Nah, where'd you go to college?' I says, 'I didn't. I started to before I worked on the railroad.'"

"And he goes bananas. He doesn't know what's coming off. He says, 'What's going on?' I says, 'Look, pal, I work for the Long Island Rail Road. And I've got an hour to get a train out of Penn Station.'"

That is how Dobson became an actor. He toured with the play, then studied acting at New York's Neighborhood Playhouse while driving cabs and tending bar to keep body and soul alive.

He also landed small parts in six films, including "The French Connection," then ventured to Hollywood in 1971 and got into TV films as a heavy in one segment of "Mod Squad."

Acting jobs still were few and far between, so, he said, he hooked on with the Santa Fe Railway in Los Angeles as an apprentice engineer, working early morning hours and doorknocking by day.

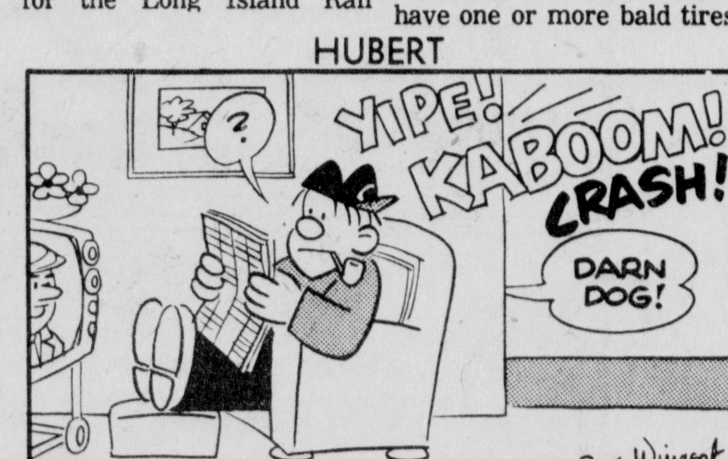

He understudied Jon Voight in a Los Angeles production of "A Streetcar Named Desire" — he abandoned the railroad for this particular trolley — but never got the big TV break he sought.

Discouraged, he returned to New York. Then he went back to Los Angeles for a possible job in a new NBC series called "Chase." He didn't get it, but landed the "Kojak" job a month later.

Weekend Crashes Fatal To 27

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ohio motorists matched their worst traffic record of the year over the weekend just ended.

The Ohio Highway Patrol reports 27 persons were killed, the same number that died over the long Memorial Day weekend.

The worst previous nonholiday weekends were the second and third weekends of July, each of which claimed 17 lives.

Two accidents this weekend claimed three lives each and two others killed two each. Other victims included four pedestrians and a man killed in a car-train accident in Dayton.

The dead:

SUNDAY

DELAWARE — Arthur Graves, 15 months, of Columbus, in a crash involving two cars and a van that left 15 others injured.

CELINA — Glen Steinbrunner, 87, of near Fort Recovery, in a three-car accident on U.S. 127 in Mercer County.

MOUNT VERNON — Gertrude Carper, 45, of Howard, in a three-car accident on U.S. 36 east of Mount Vernon.

Decision To Die Brings Mail Flood

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — When Chuck McCracken made the decision to unplug himself from his lifesaving kidney dialysis machine, he said he wanted to die "peacefully and quietly." But the McCracken household has been bustling ever since his story got worldwide attention.

Last week, his home was invaded by television crews, and broadcast and print media from as far away as London have been in contact with the McCrackens every day since he made known his decision to die.

"We had no idea that this would blossom into such worldwide coverage," McCracken said Sunday.

The 36-year-old McCracken, who had to leave his job as a television repairman when he lost his vision eight years ago, has diabetes and suffers from a diseased thyroid. Last March, he lost the use of his legs.

Given only a 30 per cent chance of living for one year even if he continued the dialysis treatment, McCracken "put the matter in the hands of Jesus."

He made his decision to die on July 22, saying the dialysis treatment — in which a machine filters wastes from the blood — was "sheer agony for me."

He told his doctors at Loma Linda University Medical Center of his

Ford May Approve Arms For Yugoslavs

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Ford told Yugoslavia's President Tito today he will give "my very personal attention" to a Yugoslav request that it be permitted to buy second-line American arms and spare arms parts.

Appearing with Tito to fill in reporters on the results of their talks here, Ford said he also would give attention to economic relations with this independent Communist country.

The Yugoslav leader, in turn, said he essentially agreed with a call by the U.S. President for moderation and flexibility in seeking a Middle East settlement.

Neither man took questions, but Ford went over the agenda of the business sessions the two leaders have had since his arrival Sunday night.

"We did discuss, of course, bilateral relations between Yugoslavia and the United States," Ford said. "These included, of course, economic relations and of course they included our military relations."

Ford, who is in Yugoslavia to boost that country's strongly independent position in the Communist world, then added: "I will give both matters my very personal attention because of their significance."

The possibility that the United States might supply spare parts and other

Queen Mother Turns 75 Today

LONDON (AP) — Britain's queen mother, "marvelous mummy" to the reigning queen and the beloved "good queen mum" to the nation she has served for more than half a century, turns 75 today.

As the daughter-in-law, sister-in-law, wife or mother of four successive British sovereigns, Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother has been enchanting the British, and many other people, for 52 years.

"A constitutional fortress in a flowered hat, three-quarter sleeves and three-strand pearls," was how one columnist recently described the regal and gracious lady.

decision and went home to face death in the solace of his family.

McCracken said his doctors predicted he might not live past his 37th birthday next Tuesday.

Since his story became known, there has been anything but solitude for McCracken, his wife, Barbara, and their four young children.

"We're getting so many calls, lots of them from kooks," said Mrs. McCracken. "We've had calls that ask us to try everything from mineral water to acupuncture. There are those who want to pray for my husband, and some people have called saying he should turn to God. These people just don't understand the complications in his case."

McCracken says he is not angry about the flood of calls and letters in his last days, even those that accuse him of "copping out" because of his decision to reach out to death.

"I am not a cop-out," McCracken says. "I'm not running away from the misery and agony. Sometimes in moments of great pain and agony, I have contemplated suicide briefly, but that would be a sin. The Lord wants you to live and I could never do that. That would be a cop-out and running away from reality."

Congress Nervous On Spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven months after Congress started its experiment of adopting a target budget and trying to hold to it, legislative budget specialists are modestly pleased but nervous.

The House, which originates all money bills, has passed 10 of the 14 regular departmental appropriations. Its Budget Committee says the total funding the House voted in these 10 bills before starting its August recess is slightly below the target figures set in the congressional budget and is close to President Ford's recommendations.

In the Senate last week, a $31.2-billion military weapons bill was rejected after Senate Budget Committee leaders warned that the figure would jeopardize congressional budget goals.

But there are catches that inspire the caution:

—The Senate, traditionally the bigger spender, has acted on only four of the 10 departmental appropriations. House budget specialists estimate that the Senate has increased the House figures in those four bills by $3.8 billion — and the Senate has six more to work on.

—The four appropriations remaining to be passed by the House include defense and foreign aid, both large and controversial items. The congressional budget calls for lower appropriations here than Ford recommended, providing a margin for more spending in other areas.

—Continued recession may build irresistible pressure for higher government spending.

—Much government spending is not controlled by appropriation. For example, Social Security benefits are automatic and interest on the public debt depends on the money market.

'Killer Highway' To Be Improved

EBENSBURG, Pa. (AP) — "Killer highway," a stretch of Pennsylvania Route 22 where 60 people have died in the last nine years, will be improved while an alternate highway is constructed, the state Department of Transportation says.

Due to renewed pressure from citizens and clergy in this Cambria County community, a $420,000 contract was awarded for repair between here and Munster. The winding road will be resurfaced with nonskid material, guard rails will be installed and the slope and elevation of the most hazardous curves will be changed.

In late spring, the Ebensburg Area Clergymen's Association organized a renewed fight to improve the road after a family of four, including an unborn child, was killed in an accident.

Deputies Investigate 3 Injury Accidents

Pickaway County Sheriff's Deputies investigated three injury accidents during the weekend.

In a two-car accident, 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Carl R. Gallant, 62, Route 1, Lockbourne, was stopped at the end of his driveway waiting for a car driven by Kirk D. Martin, 26, Route 1, Lockbourne, to pass so that he could enter the roadway.

Martin's car struck Gallant's auto causing it to spin around in the driveway.

Gallant was referred to a doctor by Deputy Jack Moats for minor injuries. Martin and a passenger, Ralph R. Martin, 35, Marysville, were both treated and released at Berger Hospital for neck and back pains.

Deputy James Fite investigated a three-vehicle accident, injuring one person, which occurred 6:10 p.m. Sunday on Route 23.

Yolanda S. Hamberg, 21, Route 1, South Point, was northbound on Route 23 and slowing down for traffic traveling in both lanes.

A second car, driven by Robert J. King, 29, Columbus, didn't observe the Hamberg vehicle preparing to slow down until he was too close to the King auto. After applying his brakes, the auto swerved to the right and struck the Hamberg auto in the right rear.

Phildon C. Cremins, 40, Columbus, applied his brakes also but was unable to avoid the collision striking the King auto in the rear.

Tami J. Lute, 15, Lucasville, passenger in the King auto, was treated and released at Berger Hospital for an injury to the lower right leg.

In another three-car accident investigated by Deputy James Fite, 9:30 p.m. Sunday, 61-year-old Mary M. Hoop, Ashville, claimed injury to her back, but refused treatment.

According to the report taken by Deputy Fite, Opal Forrester, 55, Grove City, westbound on Route 316, traveled off the right side of the road, struck a guard rail and veered left of center across the road.

Ms. Forrester's auto struck an eastbound auto in the left side driven by Ms. Hoop and continued left of center striking another auto driven by James E. Moreheart, 20, Ashville.

Impact of the collision caused Moreheart's vehicle to strike a guard-rail.
